PFAS chemicals have gained national attention as harmful chemicals that persist in the environment and are challenging to treat. In the next decade, PFAS regulations are expected to emerge which will demand significant attention and resources from municipal and environmental professionals across Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania Section of the American Water Works Association (PA-AWWA) and the Pennsylvania Water Environment Association (PWEA) recognize the important role of cooperation to address the PFAS challenge.

The ONE WATER Specialty Conference will include presentations to understand the growing concerns of PFAS for the industry, emerging regulatory environment, and opportunities to manage PFAS risks to address public health and environmental concerns.
